Mr. Phelps, of the American counsel, retorted that the American case had been restated in the counter case.

The discussion was of an acrid character, the proceedings since Sir Charles Russell began having been characterized by more heat and tenues the characterized such was the case.

There is not a word of truth in what you say," Mr. Hambleton responded.

Why, I II knock your head off," said way."

"You must think because I am an old man that I am not able to me in that I am not by more heat and temper than at any time since the opening of the tribunal.

The incident yesterday, which seemed to threaten the success of the arbitration. was based upon a difference of opinion between the American and British repre-sentatives as to the liability of the United States for seizures made in Behring the United States on the question jurisdiction. The heat exhibited by Lord Hannen, one of the British arbitrators, is considered an indication that Great Britain anticipates a favorable decision on the issue of jurisdiction, and is anxious to mulct the United States as heavily as possible in a pecuniary way. It was Sir Charles Russell who brought out, through an allusion in his arguments, this purpose of the British. Sir Charles referred to the powers of the tribunal of arbitration in regard to causing to be indemnified those who had been at a loss through the assertion by either Great Britain or the United States of alleged rights declared by the tribunal to have

Lord Hannen asked if the tribunal pro-nounced judgment on the facts of the scizures and should settle the cames and nationalities and also the ownership of the yessels seized, and should at the same time decide separately on the gen-eral question to the effect that the United States had not the right of jurisdiction claimed by it, it would not necessarily follow that the United States must necord damages.
American Counsel Phelps replied that he would give no guarantees in behalf of the Government of the United States. The treaty states that the arbitration most carefully settle the facts of the seizurer. The further questions of liability and the amount of damages must be settled by negotiations between the two governments. The arbitrators had no right to fix the Hability. Personally, Mr. Phelps added, he did not doubt that if the question as to the right of jurisdiction should be decided against the accord damages.

Lord Hannen, warm! arbitration is useless. arbitration is useless.

Senator Morgan: It would be impossible even for the President of the United States to give guarantees regarding the result of future negotiations, as when such negotiations are completed they must confirmed by a two-third's vote of the Senate in their favor.

This terminated the incident, which evidently left a deep Impression on all concerned in the case, and was followed to day by more interchanges of a some-what acrimonious character.

According to these statements Hisbop Wigger had declined to attend the reception and dinner for the reason that Father
